“We take an agnostic approach to corporate governance, with no agenda other than to get the story straight.”
— Faculty Director David F. Larcker

Corporate Governance Research Initiative

is a Stanford Graduate School of Business faculty research program that explores the practice of corporate governance in order to advance intellectual understanding of this critical area. Our goal is to encourage academics and professionals to bridge the gap between theory and practice, and to promote corporate governance as an independent area of teaching and scholarship in business schools worldwide.

CGRI is affiliated with the Arthur and Toni Rembe Rock Center for Corporate Governance, a joint initiative of Stanford Graduate School of Business and Stanford Law School.
